An untrained militant would only be an object of embarrassment to the vanguard.

Class Wargames are playing Guy Debord’s The Game of War using a replica of his original 1977 design for the board game.

Guy Debord is celebrated as the leader of the Situationist International and author of the searing critique of the media-saturated society of consumer capitalism: The Society of the Spectacle. What is much less well known is that after the May ‘68 Revolution, Debord devoted much of the rest of his life to inventing, refining and promoting what he came to regard as his most important project: The Game of War.

Politics is a continuation of war by other means.

The Game of War is a Clausewitz simulator: a Napoleonic-era military strategy game where armies must maintain their communications structure to survive - and where victory is achieved by smashing your opponent’s supply network rather than by taking their pieces.

For Debord, The Game of War wasn’t just a game - it was a guide to how people should live their lives within Fordist society. By playing this Clausewitz simulator, revolutionary activists could learn how to fight and win against the oppressors of spectacular society.

The 1789 French Revolution brought great changes in the art of war. Similarly, the establishment of spectacular domination has radically altered the art of government.

http://www.classwargames.net
Wargames are a continuation of politics by other means.

As winter drew in, we returned to our homes to plan our strategy for the forthcoming year. Despite entering the field late in 2007, Class Wargames achieved a decisive victory at the London Games Festival Fringe in October. Having mapped out the territory, the first goal of our spring offensive was to advance into the world of Art. The month of March had hardly drawn to a close when we’d successfully infiltrated the Institute of Psychoplasmics at the Pump House Gallery in Battersea Park.

Having recruited our avant-garde artists, we’ve now switched flanks by fielding our pieces at Salute ‘08, located in London’s Docklands. While the underlings of finance capital scurried hither and thither, barricading nearby Canary Wharf against the implosion of the credit bubble, Class Wargames has seized the high ground at the Excel Centre – the annual resting place of the DSEI Arms Fair. We welcome hardened wargamers to our ranks. We know that their contribution will prove decisive in the struggles to come.

However our Trained Bands would not be worthy of the name unless committed political agitators rally to our blood-red banner. To complete our mission, Class Wargames will liberate Red Lion Square by any means necessary. Here the social turmoil of the May events is being brought to life at the 1968 and All That conference and book fair.

Our Summer Campaign will consolidate these startling gains, bringing together artists, wargamers and political activists through regular club nights at the Flea Pit, on the outskirts of Shoreditch. This venue offers a variety of organic food with a licensed bar. As well as playing Guy Debord’s The Game of War with our recruits, Class Wargames will experiment with both figurine and board games that lay bare the sinews of our class oppression.

Ludic Labour!

Summer Campaign

The Flea Pit
Club nights on the 3rd Tuesday of the month from 6:30pm till 11:00 pm:
- 20th May
- 17th June
- 22nd July
- 19th August
- 16th September
49 Columbia Road
London
E27 RG
www.thefleapit.com

The Players

Dr. Richard Barbrook
University of Westminster
Ilze Black
Waterman’s Art Gallery
Lucy Blake

Mark Copplestone
Copplestone Castings
Rod Dickinson
Artist
Fabian Tompsett
Class War 1985
Alex Veness
University of the Arts

The Game of War

Guy Debord and Alice Becker-Ho’s book & game is available from:
Copplestone Castings
Stand TD08 at Salute ‘08 next to Osprey Books or Atlas Press
27 Old Gloucester Street
LONDON WC1N 3XX
www.atlaspress.co.uk

http://www.classwargames.net